James Marrese
Faculty Member, Institute for Operational Excellence

Institute for Operational Excellence Faculty Member James Marrese has been with the Institute since its incorporation in 2007, working in both training and product development. Collaborating with other Faculty Members, James has been instrumental in developing customized lean and Operational Excellence education programs for numerous global corporations including United Technologies Corporation, FMC Technologies, Actuant Corporation and more. James is also part of the Institute for OpEx’s resource development team that is responsible for launching new educational content including online training, digital guides and webinars. Working closely with the marketing team as a lean subject matter expert, James has authored numerous articles, industry reports, and presented webinars on behalf of the Institute for OpEx. Prior to working for the Institute for OpEx James worked in supply chain management at W.B. Mason.